KNOWING THE SCORE, BY KAT LATHAM (Book 1 of London Legends) Another re-read. I wasn't sure if I should review this one or not, but, after all, I did say I would review every book I read this year, and I wanted to re-read it after I recommended it to so many people (and before I read the latest one in the series).

London Legends Series by Kat Latham - Goodreads

Knowing The Score is a highly entertaining story that I really enjoyed! I love the setting of London, the accents, and the description of people and places. Kat really sets the novel up well with the prologue and the first couple of chapters. She drew me right in, wanting to know more, wanting to find out what Caitlyn and Spencer's story was.

The scoring rings on ASA targets are worth 12, 10, 8 and 5 points. Another ring scores 14 points, but only during shoot-downs. It's about the size of a half-dollar coin, and it's at the edge of the 8-point ring near the 5-point ring, which offers archers a huge risk-reward decision. If they miss the 14 ring, the best they can score is 8 points.
